ESLT Summer School | online edition

Teaching Translation as an Ethical Practice

5-8 September 2023

Programme

The seventh annual ESLT Summer School will take place online, bringing together around twenty-five translators and educators from across Europe who are passionate about teaching literary translation.

As ever, the event is focussed on training the teacher of literary translation, and this year's theme is "Teaching Translation as an Ethical Practice". In recent decades, ethical issues have come increasingly to the fore in translation, but how can this "ethical turn" best be reflected in the teaching curriculum, and how can we approach the ethics of translation teaching itself? The programme includes a mixture of lectures, seminars and workshops.

Confirmed faculty participants include Cecilia Alvstad, Paul Bandia, Haidee Kotze, Vanda Mikšić, Anthony Pym, Kristiina Taivalkoski-Shilov and Katarzyna Tryczyńska.

"I've benefited a lot from the experiences of my colleagues as well as the lecturers and mentors, and I've also found answers and solutions to many of the issues I had with teaching translation."

"I gained a lot of tips I can implement right away and information to discuss with my colleagues to develop our curriculum."

Application procedures

Applicants should submit the following documents (in English):

- 1) A letter of motivation, including an indication of the role and strategic impact of participation in the ESLT Summer School in your career planning;
- 2) A full CV, including contact details and a record of translation practice.

Applications should be submitted by e-mail to eslt@fusp.it by May 15, 2023.

"It was a lively, inspiring, event-packed summer school with a fantastic and diverse group of people and therefore a very stimulating and enjoyable experience."

"The lectures were fascinating. The group discussions helped break the ice and work together on practical ideas, which I enjoyed a lot."

Cost

On confirmation of acceptance, a registration fee of €120.00 (incl. VAT) will be payable to ESLT to cover all tuition. Returning alumni are eligible for a 50% discount; PETRA-E members for a €100,00 fee.

Two full-fee bursaries will be offered.

About ESLT

ESLT aims to support professional literary translation by creating a sustainable infrastructure for the education of literary translation teachers.

Founded in 2017, the European School of Literary Translation is organised by four partners: British Centre for Literary Translation, Centre of Expertise for Literary Translation (Dutch/Flemish), Fondazione Unicampus San Pellegrino and PETRA-E. The ESLT implements the PETRA-E Framework for the Education and Training of Literary Translators.
